INVENTORY — ADVENTURING GEAR, ARMS, ARMOR, AND OTHER EQUIPMENT

???. A ring seemingly made from gold; it sports a dark cracked gem in its setting that visibly leaks out residual magic. You gain a +1 to saving throws while you wear it. The ring has 6 charges. While wearing the ring, you can expend a charge to cast magic missile as a 5th-level spell. Daily at dusk, the ring recovers 1d6 charges. While you wear the ring, you can use an action to enter the Astral Plane along with everything you are wearing and carrying. You remain there until you use an action to return to the plane you were on. You reappear in the last space you occupied, or if that space is occupied, the nearest unoccupied space.

Archimagus Materia. When you attune to this Materia, you gain access to a repertoire of additional spells. Each of these spells counts as a prepared spell for you, but it doesn't count against the number of wizard spells you can prepare. The Materia Arcana contains the following spells: Identify, Detect Magic, Mage Armor, Magic Missile, Mirror Image, Misty Step, Counterspell, Fly, Lightning Bolt, Fire Shield, Cone of Cold

Forgeblade. In old times, an invading army crafted hundreds of these to fight fey-aligned creatures

Cold Iron. Made from a specific iron alloy, it bypasses the resistances of fey creatures, dealing an extra 1d6 damage against fey.

Magic-Tempered Edge. While holding this blade, you can cast the absorb element spell with it. This specific forgeblade, identified by a weird, notched metal on its blade, seems to be mentioned in old lore. It hides a secret that clearly sets it apart from its brethren. Attunement might reveal this, but how to attune to this blade is not apparent. Perhaps keeping it close might yield its secrets
